6255 W. Sunset Blvd 12th Floor

Los Angeles, CA 90028

My name is Martin Russell Johnson – I am the program director for a Los Angeles County based non-profit organization called Kids In The Spotlight (KITS). Our mission is to help foster youth heal and grow from their trauma by giving them the courage to share their stories to the world through the art of filmmaking. In addition to mitigating their trauma through artistic expression, KITS youth are given the opportunity to learn invaluable production skills from high profile film industry professionals – preparing them for entry level jobs in the entertainment industry.

Our 10 Week Screenwriting & Filmmaking Program program is designed to actively target the areas in which foster youth need the most support. The first 5 weeks of screenwriting instruction pushes our youth to open up to their peers to craft personal stories that permit them to take action and confront their issues. The next 3 weeks of the program are dedicated to acting, where our instructors help the youth enhance their self-confidence by improving their presentation and communication skills. The next week of the program is dedicated to the casting process, where each of the youth audition in front of their peers, and then have the opportunity to act as casting directors themselves to fill the adult roles of their projects. The final week of the program is a 12-hour production day, where the stories they wrote 10 weeks ago come to life on set while a team of industry professionals guide them through the production process.

"The Ties That Bind" was written by our 18-22-year-old foster youth, and it will be shown at our annual awards show/fundraiser taking place on November 2, 2019.

Any fees waived and/or reduced for this project by FilmL.A. on behalf of the City of Los Angeles will result in an equivalent reduction in cost to Kids In The Spotlight.

Thank you for your time and consideration.

Cheers,

Martin Russell Johnson
